

SCARECROW WALK

SEPTEMBER 8-18, 2022

Dawn to Dusk • Free to Public

Be part of the Scarecrow Walk held September 8-18 at the Utah State University Botanical Center in Kaysville, Utah. Five thousand visitors are expected to attend this festival to explore the beautiful gardens, learn about Extension educational opportunities, and view and vote on scarecrows designed by local businesses, individuals, and organizations.

The festival dates also include two onsite Farmers Markets and our Taste of the USU Botanical Center event, which focus on supporting and promoting local agriculture. In partnership with these events, the Scarecrow Walk includes hay rides, fresh produce sampling, fun entertainment, food trucks, and more!

USU BOTANICAL CENTER

WHO WE ARE

The USU Botanical Center guides the conservation and wise use of plant, water, and energy resources through research-based educational experiences, demonstrations, and technology.

Utah State University (USU) Extension is a network of local experts who bring relevant information, education, and solutions to individuals, families, and communities. USU Extension offers online, research-based information and live programming about gardening, family finance, relationship education, food safety, emergency preparedness, agriculture, natural resources, and 4-H and youth programs.

WHAT WILL YOUR SUPPORT DO?

Your support will help provide educational opportunities for thousands of adults and children each year who visit the grounds and enjoy educational classes, from gardening to food preservation, and promote building relationships with nature through experience.

The USU Botanical Center features a much-loved urban fishery, walking and biking trails, wetland areas that support birds and other wildlife, volunteer-tended gardens, a seasonal farmers market, and a full schedule of classes, workshops, educational field trips, and family-friendly events, such as our springtime Davis Heritage Festival, as well as other seasonal events.
