

My name is Sadie Winn, and I was born and raised in Nephi, Utah. I graduated from high school in 2025 and am currently pursuing a degree in Agricultural Education with the goal of building a career in Extension and agricultural education.

Growing up in agriculture and 4-H has shaped who I am and inspired my passion for educating and serving others. I am excited for the opportunity to continue that journey as the Utah 4-H Agriculture and Animal Science Intern.

Agriculture has always been a major part of my life. I was raised on my family's farm and have been involved in 4-H for as long as I can remember. I began showing livestock at the age of eight and have shown sheep, pigs, steers, and horses. In addition to livestock projects, I have participated in and helped lead sewing and cooking camps, while also attending soap-making, leather stamping, and many other educational workshops.

My leadership experiences through 4-H have been especially meaningful. I served on my county 4-H Teen Council and was a member of the presidency for four years, where I helped organize events such as 4-H in the Park, community service projects, and other youth activities. I also served as a Utah 4-H Southern Region Ambassador for three years and have volunteered at numerous local and state 4-H events. One of my proudest accomplishments was placing third in the Utah 4-H State Horse Demonstration Contest. One of my most memorable experiences was when I got to attend the Alaska 4-H Summit.

I am honored to serve as the Utah 4-H Agriculture and Animal Science Intern this summer. I look forward to working with youth, building relationships within communities across the state, and gaining experiences that will prepare me for a future career in Extension. I am excited to learn, grow, and help make a positive impact through Utah 4-H.
