Chip Kemp, American Simmental Association

Chip Kemp is the Director of Member and Industry Relations for the American Simmental Association. His duties range from assisting progressive commercial producers with genetic awareness of crossbred cow herds to working with the 12 breed association partners that make up the International Genetic Solutions (IGS) platform. IGS is the largest beef genetic evaluation on the planet and provides multi-breed EPDs to those involved.

Prior to ASA, Chip was an instructor for 18 years at the University of Missouri. In this role he was involved in classroom teaching, coaching of competitive livestock judging teams, oversight of internships, and coordination of a USDA approved meats processing facility.

Chip was also the founder of JudgingPro.com, an online resource for livestock evaluation videos and classroom aids. He spent two years with the Beef Division of IBP, inc. in Amarillo, TX. He grew up working for Gerloff Farms, an Angus and SimAngus seedstock operation based in Missouri, and is still involved with this program. Chip and his wife Nicky, have two grown children and reside in Auxvasse, MO.
