Winter 2024

Over the course of the last year, our Farmers Market Handbook Coordinator and previous director of Slow Food Utah, Gwen Crist, has been working hard to write and publish Utah's first Farmers Market Manager Handbook! This newsletter features the handbook, alongside results from our pilot Utah farmers market impact data collection project. Also, did you know that 2023 might be the year in which global heat-trapping pollution peaked and began to decline? Discover all of this and more in our winter newsletter. Here's to amplifying and uplifting Utah's local food movement in 2024!
