One of the most important traits in team members is Dependability – being reliable so that people can count on you. This is true in school, family, business, and life. Dependability means your teammates or co-workers can count on you to be on time, meet deadlines, take initiative, handle important details, follow the rules, communicate, and work well with others.

CONVERSATION STARTERS:
- When was the last time you told someone “You can count on me!”? Are you a dependable person? Give an example of why or why not.

Dependability is one of the most important character traits of successful people, and without it, it is unlikely you will be able to hold down a job for very long.

- As a student, how can you prepare for storms? (not waiting until the last minute to do chores or homework, stay focused on important things, ask for help when you need it, offer help when you can give it, learn from mistakes/storms how to better prepare the next time, looking ahead and anticipating problems.)

CONCLUSION:

The best we can ask for in a friend, a coworker, or a leader is that they do what they say they will do -- we can count on them. Dependability is a trait to develop in yourself so that you and the people in your life can sleep through the storm.
A young man applied for a job as a farmhand. When the farmer asked for his qualifications, he said, “I can sleep through a storm.”

This puzzled the farmer, but he liked the young man. So he hired him.

A few weeks later, the farmer and his wife were awakened in the night by a violent storm ripping through the valley. He leapt out of bed and called for his new hired hand, but the young man was sleeping soundly.

They quickly began to check things to see if all was secure. They found that the shutters of the farmhouse had been securely fastened. A good supply of logs had been set next to the fireplace.

The farmer and his wife then inspected their property. They found that the farm tools had been placed in the storage shed, safe from the elements. The bales of wheat had been bound and wrapped in tarpaulins.

The tractor had been moved into its garage. The barn was properly locked tight. Even the animals were calm and had plenty of feed.

All was well.

The farmer then understood the meaning of the young man’s words: “I can sleep through a storm.”

[Don’t read this part aloud. Let them figure it out. Moral: Because the farmhand was dependable when the skies were clear, he was prepared for any storm. So when the storm did actually break, he was not concerned or afraid. He could sleep in peace.]
